They discuss how keeping Goku alive is the key to Goku Black accessing even deeper reservoirs of power, but Goku Black seems content with the immense strength that Zamasu already at his disposal. Zamasu raises the important point that it's not significant to have an immortal body if that body isn't powerful (somewhere Garlic Jr. just got a chill). It's essentially like Beerus has his finger on a Destrukto-Gun that aimed at Zamasu and just waiting for the okay to pull the trigger. The killing intent is strong on his spirit. Whis adds as he elaborates on their investigation. Just when it seems like the heroes gain the upper hand this storyline adds another curious wrinkle to their situation. His annihilation of Zamasu is a strong reminder of just how powerful the God is. On that note, Future Trunks is caught in a real funk over abandoning Future Mai once more and leaving her back in that dystopia. He's out to kill Gowasu. AA If A last week's episode was all about battle tactics and putting together a strong, smart attack strategy, then Protect The Supreme Kai Gowasu is the sweet, sweet follow-through where that plan gets put into action. This is able to put his only-in-emergencies time rewind ability into play so they can prevent Gowasu's death and then swoop into the scene to deliver some necessary justice. It's also considerably awesome when Beerus' theme music kicks in right when he obliterates Zamasu. This is the proof that Beerus and Whis have been waiting for all of this time. Zamasu is about to be Universe 10's Supreme Kai and they can't just murder him. They just need to wait for the perfect moment when the Supreme Kai-in-training finally lets his true colors come forward. There's a lot more tact and secrecy than Dragon Ball used to operating with (and Goku doesn't exactly understand what's going on here), but it helps establish the high stakes and tension ossid otium e zef.
